

Do us a favor and do not ease the guidelines for TV. The idea that the rules should be changed because the networks have a difficult time following them is pathetic oversight. The "what people want" is speaking more toward a little more decency considering the responses so far. There are people out there who do not gravitate to the lowest common denominator for entertainment. There is no fine line any more, it's all becoming been there done that. Bad language, nudity, sexual encounters, and vulgarity are a plenty within the current guidelines. Could use a little less of it.
